FRIDAY, MAY 14, 1886.

The Duke of Connaught paid a private and unofficial visit to the Colonial Exhibition buildings at South Kensington. His Royal Highness spent a long time in the Canadian court and was greatly interested in the Hubbard collection of natural history specimens from Manitoba and the Northwest. It is a thousand pities that the Canadian exhibits did not reach London in time for the opening of the exhibition. Her Majesty the Queen officially opened the exhibition.

Hon. Mr. Thompson has given notice of resolutions respecting the administration of justice in the Northwest. They provide for the repeal of the enactment respecting stipendiary magistrates now in power, and for the establishment of a Superior Court of civil and criminal jurisdiction, to consist of five judges, with a yearly salary of $4,000 each. It also contemplates a division of the territories into five judicial districts, and to appoint for each a sheriff and clerk of court, the sheriff's salary to be $500 and fees.

An order in council has been passed transferring the following trails from Dominion control to that of the Government of Manitoba and the Northwest Territory: Saskatchewan Forks and Carlton trail, from the east line of township 48, range 24, west of second meridian, to the north line of township 45, range 1, west of third meridian, excepting through the municipality of Prince Albert; several trails from Prince Albert to South Branch, and from Carlton Forks to Batoche; from St. Laurent to Duck Lake; from Batoche to Gabriels, and from Duck Lake to Gabriels.

The Kingston Age says: Mexico has just set an example that is worthy of emulation in the way of handing over to justice fugitive criminals who seek an asylum in her territory. D. H. Scott, charged with having forged paper to the extent of from $25,000 to $50,000 on the Merchant's Bank at Winnipeg was followed to Mexico. The Mexican authorities informed the detective that if he caught his man they would let him take him. He found him a d although legal barriers were sought to be raised to prevent his removal the Mexican authorities nevertheless handed him over. We are under the impression that no extradition arrangement exists between this country and Mexico. All the more honor to them then for not interfering to shelter a criminal.

Another expedition is about being sent to explore Hudson's Bay. It is not an exploration of the straits that is wanted this time, but a settlement of the question as to whether or not there is a continuous channel running through the great unexplored peninsula that lies between Hudson's and Ungava Bays. A glance at the map shows that this is very likely to be the case. Several large rivers empty their waters into Ungava Bay, the river Kotsuok or South river being the largest; several large rivers also empty their waters into Hudson's Bay on its eastern shore between the latitudes of 55° and 60°. There is very possibly some connection between the two bays, but whether the ice which packs into Ungava Bay will allow of navigation is another matter.

American capitalists have made arrangements to develop the iron mines in the neighborhood of Lake Winnipeg. They will take the ore to Fargo, Dakota, where smelting works are to be erected, the American duty on ore being only 75 cents a ton, while that on pig iron is six dollars a ton. It is expected that the furnaces alone will employ two hundred men, and arrangements are being made to establish several important manufacturing enterprises to supplement the blast furnaces. It would seem that with so many railways in course of construction and projected in the Canadian Northwest, the smelting works ought to be established in Manitoba near the mines instead of in Dakota. The Government should do something to encourage the establishment of smelting works in Canada. Iron is generally regarded as the backbone of a nation, and no country has a better supply of the mineral in its natural state than Canada. If the Government would insist that all railroads receiving grants of land, or other public assistance, must purchase rails in Canada, our iron industry would soon begin to boom.—Montreal Star.

Hon. Mr. Carling moved the House into committee on the experimental farms resolutions. A vote was taken two years ago for the purpose of establishing an experimental farm. The intention now was to establish a farm of 400 or 500 acres in the vicinity of Ottawa. The expenditure for that farm was estimated to be about $120,000. The proposition, whether it would be immediately carried out or not, was to establish a station for the three provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, one for Manitoba, one for the Northwest Territories and one for British Columbia. The expenditure for all would be about $250,000. The annual expenditure for the central station and other stations if carried out would be from $30,000 to $35,000. Mr. Mills favored farms in the provinces but objected to the central one, but nearly all the other speakers of posed the scheme.

THE COLONIAL EXHIBITION.

The Manitoba Sun of May 3rd, says: The Colonial Exhibition which has excited so much attention and been so freely advertised the last few months, will be formally opened tomorrow by Her Majesty the Queen. There will be a wide field of competition, and one third of the human race will contribute to the great event. India is itself not a country, but a collection of countries. Nor are the colonies any easier to classify. Canada, reaching as she does from the Atlantic to the Pacific, can fill her courts with the riches of a vast stretch of the American continent. The West Indies are more homogeneous. But when we cross to the mainland, we have colonies as tropical as British Honduras and Demetera, and as temperate as the Falkland Islands, from which to collect examples of the means by which our fellow-subjects prosper and grow rich. Australia is in itself a continent, and from the sugar plantations of Queensland to the wheat-covered plains of the south, can offer almost any crop of any climate, whilst in New Zealand we have a region not unlike the old country. In the Cape and Natal we find an other land, not so varied perhaps, but equally interesting, and though there is little to be said for either Sierra Leone or the Gambia as homes for our own race, it must be remembered that men of the most varied complexions are interested in the forthcoming display. From wheat to pine apples, from Afghans whose homes are in the mountains near Peshawar to languid Bengalese, from the moist plains drained by the lower Ganges, from gold and diamonds to iron and coal, from the cedars from the Himalayas to the costly cabinet woods of the south, peoples and products of the most widely different characters will pour into the Kensington exhibition. Australia will send in her wool and meat, her sugar, oranges, cotton, wheat, copper, gold and opals, and neither Tasmania nor New Zealand will be much behind the other Australian colonies. South Africa will be to the front with her diamonds; though, after all the vast array of wines from Australia, Cyprus, and the Cape have been tasted, there will still be little mitigation of the regret at the prospect of scant supplies from the vineyards of the Gironde and the Rhine. Canada will display her minerals and her timber, her model farms and cattle ranches, her fish from cod to oolachan.

The enumeration might be continued to almost excessive length. Great Britain and her colonies represent all the earth can produce. A world's exhibition could not be more comprehensive or more varied. Such an aggregation is a noteworthy event—from a national standpoint as showing the vastness of the British Empire and of British trade, and as tending to bind more closely together widely separated colonies pursuing interests even more widely diverging; from a practical standpoint as giving an opportunity for extending trade by acquiring valuable information as to the wants of the colonies represented. Amidst such a gathering Canada will make no mean show. Her exhibits will be closely enquired into, and it is to be hoped that this northwestern portion of the Dominion will be placed in a favorable light. There is no portion of the British Empire with greater prospects and deserving of greater attention.

NO LIGHT IN THE WINDOW.

As the train sped along in the night, with drowsy passengers at etched upon the seats, the conductor was observed frequently peering out of the frosty window into the darkness. The night was black, and nothing could be seen but a sheet of snow over a shadowy light shape, and yet the conductor started his eyes with an exclamation held his face in a weary looking face it was, too close to the window pane.

"Looking to see if your girl is awake yet?" inquired the inquisitive passenger, with a coarse laugh.

The conductor looked around and stared as with a lucky voice he replied simply:

"Yes."

And then the inquisitive passenger became garrulous and loquacious. He sat down beside the conductor and pecked him in the ribs as he lightly said:

"Ah, I see. Going to get married and quit the road. That to marry a farmer's daughter. Worth much?"

"She's worth a million to me."

Further remarks in a similar vein did the passenger make, but the conductor declined to make replies. Suddenly the whistle of the locomotive gave a long low moan, the conductor since his eyes still closed to the window, seemed to fasten his gaze upon some object in the darkness, and then fell back in his seat with a cry of despair upon his lips.

The passengers gathered round to inquire the nature of the trouble, when the brakeman assisted his chief to rise and led him into the baggage car. The conductor's face was as white as the snow banks, which flung the two tracks, and his eyes were a look of terrible grief.

"Poor Sam," said the brakeman upon his return, "it's a bad night for him. Four weeks his little girl has been ill. Night after night he was at her bed, but she would not better and he came back to his train. He arranged with his wife that if all was well with the little one should display a lamp in the window of the sick room. The boys all knew it, and every night we all looked for the light almost as eagerly as Sam himself. And here by the side of the track here here a few miles and tonight there was no light in the window for Sam."

INVESTING IN CANADA.

Large Sale of Pine Lands to Michigan.

Col. M. J. Jones, of Saginaw, Mich., in the city, having just returned from an extended visit to Canada. While discussing business affairs in that country he said:

"I have bought four parcels in Canada 500,000 acres, or 20 townships, of standing white pine. The land is situated on Georgian Bay, and upon the Serpentine and Muskegon rivers. There is upwards of 2,000,000 feet of timber upon the tract. It is all white pine. There is no Norway pine in that region. I have paid a large sum upon the purchase, and would not sell out for an advance. I have been engaged in the business of buying pine lands for most of my life, and think that nothing outside of the Saginaw valley was ever so like this whole Georgian Bay country full of good pine. It is far superior to the Wisconsin or Lake Superior pine. I think this is the biggest transaction that has taken place in pine lands in Canada. Upon the property at the mouth of the Serpentine River there is a saw mill that costs 40,000,000 feet a year; it costs $250,000, has saws and every convenience, including an iron steam engine and two barges. There is a good wharf at the mouth of Serpentine River, with wharves, etc. The barges take a lumber to Chicago, Buffalo or any other port on the chain of great lakes. It is delivered precisely as shown, as if from the mouth of the Saginaw River. The whole plant cost the former proprietor nearly $400,000."

The Canadian Pacific Railway is on the northern border of the tract. A spur runs down through it, built for a rail shipping facilities from the mill itself. I think no land could lay better both for rail and water transportation. It is well set up by lumbering streams. Governor has a large amount of timber in the middle of these limits north of us. Col. Bliss, of Saginaw, is also interested in the same region. We propose to bring the logs over and saw them in Michigan. We are Michigan men, and hope to make our purchases here to the benefit of our people here. Notwithstanding our investments in Canada we will stand by protection for Michigan lumber, unless we have reciprocity or free trade applied to all articles of commerce between the two countries. Detroit Free Press.

In the House, in reply to Mr. Watson, Sir A. Carter said that the intention of the Government to extend military organization to the Northwest Territories, but the strength and details were not yet decided.

Senator Schuch has given his mind a searching promulgation that a national committee be organized for the purpose of collecting information regarding the existing natural food products of the Northwest Territories, and the best means of conserving and increasing them, and that the said committee be empowered for persons, papers and records. It is not likely that the committee will get to work this season.

The Dominion will shortly appoint an Inspector of Indian Agencies for the Northwest Territories as an officer of experience to examine the supplies furnished by contractors before they are served out to the Indians. This is a direct result of the recent sale by the Government that some of the flour supplied to the Indians by contractors was unfit for food.
